Your one-time verification code was sent to (775)

Before we continue, let's go over these key details again.

 GDC is not insurance.

Instead, members share qualifying repair costs with one another. This model can help drivers who stay accident-free save more money. But unlike traditional insurance, it does not provide guaranteed payouts.
